Grand Teton National Park Wyoming

Jackson Lake Kayaking and Snake River Rafting

July 19-22, 2012

This group is limited to 12 participants – reserve your space today!

Two days of sea kayaking on Jackson Lake, a secluded camp site and a mellow rafting trip down the spectacular Snake River equals a peerless tour of the Tetons... Imagine paddling your kayak through a morning mist with the sun rising behind you, spotting wildlife in the grassy meadows and forest glens.

Our first night, before heading to our camp site, will be at The Lexington at Jackson Hole; located in the heart of Jackson, Wyoming, offering a perfect blend of western hospitality and modern luxury. You will meet with the other participant for a Welcome Dinner at a local restaurant.

Note: this trip is good for both experienced and non-experienced kayakers.

Sample Itinerary

Our schedule will be relaxed and flexible. Every trip is different depending upon the group and the nature of adventure travel. The following is a sample of what your trip might be like.

- On the morning of our trip, we will meet our guide and be given waterproof bags to pack your gear. Our guide will present a thorough demonstration on kayaking techniques and safety procedures, and then we are on our way. As we move across the lake, we stop periodically to relax, have a bite to eat and revel beneath the towering peaks of the Teton Range. It is seven miles to our secluded campsite. Your personal gear will be safely stowed in a motorized snout rig.
- Spend the afternoon however you choose: finish your novel, paint a sunset or fish for trout. A guide will lead short paddles on the lake and perhaps to the Moran Canyon area on shore. Here we may hike up a rushing creek to spectacular waterfalls.
- Enjoy dinner in a wilderness setting with menus that surprise you with their diversity, quality and presentation.
- Our evenings in camp are as magical as our days, and after dinner we might enjoy a moonlight paddle, or perhaps a bright and cheery campfire. Fall asleep under the stars of the wide Wyoming sky.
- Each morning begins with a scrumptious breakfast to send us off on our day's adventure; to explore, hike, swim or fish in the sapphire waters. Perhaps we'll encounter a moose drinking from the shallows, an eagle perched in a nearby aspen, or a family of deer as we glide past the shore in our silent kayaks.

Day 3

- After breakfast, we'll load up early leaving kayaks and Jackson Lake behind; we take a 20-minute shuttle ride around the dam to access the river portion of our journey. We put in at Pacific Creek aboard sturdy rafts.
- We expertly maneuver through the maze of the Snake River's braided channels. Wildlife is abundant and the sightings are many as we meander across the valley floor.
- Stunning views of the Tetons, the most jagged range in the Rocky Mountains, develop and change as we follow the twists and turns of the river's passage.
- We stop for lunch on the riverbank. We will have covered 10.5 river miles as we end our journey at Deadman's Bar. A shuttle returns us by approximately 4:00 p.m. We return to The Lexington at Jackson for our last night.
